

For every child

whose story began before they can remember,
and for every family that continues to learn together.

This book belongs to...

Every page belongs to you.

Your story is yours.

You can ask about it whenever you want.

Once Upon a You

Before your shoes stood by our door, before your toys filled our rooms, before we knew your laugh... there you were.

Little. Wonderful. Already beginning your very own story.

And somewhere in that story, a little star
was shining.

The First Part of Your Story

You grew inside your birth mummy's tummy. She is part of your story. And your beginning matters.

Sometimes birth parents cannot care for a child every day. Plans have to be made to help keep children safe and cared for.

None of that is ever a child's fault.

Your story began before you came to us. And we can always talk about that part of your story, too.

Meanwhile...

Somewhere else, we were waiting.

Monday. Tuesday. Wednesday. By Thursday, we were getting rather good at it.

Would you like puddles? Would you snore? Would you eat broccoli? Surely somebody likes broccoli.

The story continues...

...and the little star keeps shining.

Enjoyed the beginning?

The rest of the story — all 26 pages, full colour —
is waiting in the complete book.

The Little Star Who Found Home

A story about adoption and belonging

Sarah Harper · £9.99 · Ages 3–7